Review & Update:

Genesis Metals Corp.

Genesis Metals (TSVX: GIS) appears to be in pretty good shape given its $3.1-million treasury on December 31 followed up by another $1 million raise since then. Also, given a mandatory temporary shutdown of drilling activity until at least April 13, 2020, by the Quebec government, the burn rate should be low until the company is able to get back in the field. Prior to the work stoppage, a total of 2,010 meters in eight holes of the planned about 2,500-meter Phase 1 program had been completed. The Phase 1 drilling has focused on improving definition and expanding the volume of higher-grade domains which form of plunging shoots within the Chevrier Main Deposit. The program has proceeded as planned up until the work stoppage. The company intends to complete the program and move forward with previously announced surface exploration and additional drilling phases, once permitted to do so. Genesis is currently fully financed for up to 8,000 meters of drilling this year at Chevrier. With a new management team in place I am very optimistic about this company's exploration prospects when exploration is permitted to get underway again.
